MANUFACTURING WORKFORCE

YOUR BUSINESS CONSISTS OF AN EVER-FLUCTUATING FLOW OF NEEDS. IN A PERFECT WORLD, THE CONTRACTS, PROJECTS, AND WORKLOADS WOULD COME AT A CONSTANT PACE. CREATING A PORTION OF YOUR TEAM THAT IS UNDER A FLEXIBLE WORK CONTRACT IS A WAY MANY LEADERS ARE BETTER MANAGING THIS CHALLENGING PROBLEM.

Quality Inspectors, Forklift Drivers, General Production, Assemblers, Shipping and Receiving, Machine Operators, Warehouse Associates, Supervisors, and Team Leads are all part of this mission-critical workforce. Most facility leaders will have a core group of these skills on staff but when workflow increases or a major project drops into the company, you are faced with several challenges:

1. You need to add to your workforce but not over-hire which creates a financial challenge for the company at the end of the project.
2. Need to staff quickly but also need to focus on the project plans, not the hiring process.
3. Always looking for new team members, but there is a risk of lost investment if an employee isn't what you hoped for or does not fit into your culture.
